These workshops aim to offer to intermediate and advanced dance students some different views and ways of working and understanding dance today, according to four choreographers/dancers internationally acclaimed. Students are encouraged to follow the three workshops.

Nicola Monaco, through pieces of repertoire by Akram Khan, will allow participants to explore their own creativity through exploring rhythm, speed, cycles and silence; Thomas Huert, will teach his personal tools to work on movement and musicality; and Guy Nader and Maria Campos, will bring the students closer to the creation processes based on partnering work and contact work.
