These workshops want to offer intermediate and advanced dance students different visions of working and understanding dance today.

Antonis Strouzas will introduce the participants in the Fighting Monkey Research methodology. This system works from irregular movement situations, creating the constant need to work on adaptability by promoting improvisation, imagination and creativity.

The Iron Skulls Co workshop is a meeting place between different languages: urban dance, contemporary dance and Butoh. One of the objectives of the collective is also to find ways to work cooperatively and create material together.
